Claremont Graduate University

Jeanne Nakamura is Associate Professor of Psychology at Claremont Graduate University. She received her B.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. She is cofounder of the positive psychology concentration and Quality of Life Research Center at Claremont, and is a past member of the board of the International Positive Psychology Association. She helped direct the Good Work Project, a series of studies of excellence and social responsibility in professional life. She investigates positive psychology in a developmental context, including vital engagement and creativity, mentoring and good work, and aging well. She coauthored Good Mentoring and Creativity and Development and coedited Applied Positive Psychology. Her current writing and research address motivation and engagement in adulthood, the formative influences of mentoring and the formation of good mentors, and social innovation after sixty as a model for positive aging.
