

Professor Tammie Ronen Rosenbaum is the Dean of the Gershon Gordon Faculty of Social Sciences, Tel-Aviv University. She is the Head of the Child and Adolescence Clinical Studies at the Bob Shapell School of Social Work, and the Head of the Renata Adler Memorial Research Center for Child Welfare and Protection at the Tel-Aviv University.

She is an expert in child and adolescence development as well as in cognitive behavior therapy and positive psychology.

She was the previous President of the Israeli Association for Behavior and Cognitive Psychotherapies.

Professor Ronen is the author of many books and research articles in this area and conduct numerous studies on risk behavior, aggression and subjective wellbeing of adolescence.

She trains and serves as a consultant in treating adolescence in many European countries.

She developed several intervention models for reducing aggression by increasing positive affect and self-control skills via group therapy ("Empowering children and adolescents" ) via sport ("Different experience") and by music with the Israeli Philharmonic Orchestra (Scale up – Music for social change"). These projects were found effective and had been adapted by the Ministry of Education to apply all over Israel.
